

WHAT ARE THE EIP AWARDS?

The EFMD Excellence in Practice Awards (EiP) recognise outstanding case studies describing an effective and impactful Leadership and Development intervention between partner organisations. The specific Learning and Development domain in which the intervention is situated can be Executive, Professional, Talent or Organisational Development.

The winning case studies are selected based on the review of 4 key areas.

1. Properly Documented “Challenge”

The jury looks at the business challenge and how the corporate L&D organisation and/or potential provider(s) documented it for the first time:

- How was the challenge initially formulated?
- Who owned the business challenge?
- What was the link of this business challenge with the corporate strategy?
- How was this embedded in wider HR and business processes?
- What was the desired impact of the L&D initiative as formulated from the outset?

3. Appropriate “L&D Initiative”

The jury assesses the appropriateness of the design, delivery & evaluation of the L&D initiative:

- What was the programme design (definition of intended learning outcomes), programme structure & delivery (range of delivery modes used)?
- What were the learning methods and learning environment (balanced use of programme location and development options) deployed?
- What was the definition, communication and management of entry requirements (selection methodology)?
- Which were the progress indicators and learning measurement?

2. Effective Partnering Agreement / “Commitment”

The jury reviews the effectiveness of the “contracting” stage and how the initial brief is translated by the partners into an actionable project:

- What was the analysis from the provider & corporate L&D organisation concerning the changes in human behaviour / performance and organisation necessary to achieve the desired impact?
- What were the initial commitments regarding deliverables and impact; financial parameters; guaranteeing commitment of all stakeholders; timeline and major milestones?
- What was the importance of the initiative to the L&D function and what was the complexity and scale of the initiative?
- How sustainable and balanced was this partnership at the start?

4. Proven Business “Impact”

The jury reviews the impact the L&D initiative had on the people and organisation concerned:

- Which quantitative and qualitative indicators of impact were used by the corporate L&D organisation?
- What were the actual changes caused by the L&D initiative?
- What was the ultimate impact on the company’s business: financially on its customers or its products and/or services?
- How did the owners and or stakeholders express the perceived impact?

HOW DOES THE AWARDS PROCESS WORK?

An international judging panel reviews the case studies submitted for the EiP Awards. The panel is composed of representatives from EFMD, companies, business schools and alternative providers.

WHEN WERE THE AWARDS LAUNCHED?

The EiP Awards were launched in 2007 and are now in their 15th year. Since the launch of the Awards over 450 cases have been submitted for review.

WHY WERE THE AWARDS LAUNCHED?

The EiP Awards were launched to provide a platform to showcase outstanding L&D partnerships with a vision to become one of the global flagship awards programmes that demonstrate best collaborative practices in the field of executive education. We are well on the way to achieving this goal, as over the last 15 years the EiP Awards have really grown in prestige and global recognition with an outstanding list of companies, business schools and providers taking part.

WHAT BENEFITS DO THE EIP AWARDS BRING?

- International recognition of excellence in L&D
- Focus on impact of L&D projects positioning learning and development as investments rather than expenses
- Mechanism for benchmarking
- Sharing of good practice and mutual learning
- Legitimacy to internal and external stakeholders for applicants and winners
- Wide visibility and marketing value for applicants and winners
